FINE IMPOSED ON GEORGE E. LO-RENZ IS NOT PAID.

Term of Two Years' Imprisonment Expired Last Saturday-Course in Such Cases.

The sentence of two years' imprisonment mposed upon Dr. George E. Lorenz, one of the alleged conspirators in the postal fraud cases, expired last Saturday, but there is no record of his having paid the fine of $10,000 that was made a part of sentence. Had the fine been paid Dr. Lorenz would have been released from the Moundsville, West 'Va., penitentiary Saturday, but under the law he will have to remain there thirty days after the expiration of the two years to take advantage of the poor convict's act. Such, it t stated, is done by prisoners filing affidavits with a United States commissioner Prompt, reliable service quite as much as fine work and fair prices explains the fame of HOWARD PRINTING.

Should the government take issue with Lorenz and make an effort to prove that he is able to pay the fine, it is likely that a delay will result in his restoration to liberty.

The position

The position of druggist and chemist in the prison is one that is not easily filled, a prisoner who is capable of performing the work not always being available. Dr. Lorenz, it is said, has filled the position to the entire satisfaction of Warden Haddox, and the latter is sorry that he is so soon to be compelled to find a successor.

Post Office Department Conspiracy. Dr. Lorenz was convicted of complicity in the conspiracy which was alleged to have existed in connection with the sale of the Groff letter-box fasteners, and was sentenced to serve two years and to pay a fine of $10,000. He was not sent to the prison with the other defendants, who went there the 13th of February, 1905, being permitted to defer his going until July 4 the same year. The postponement in his case, it is said, was due to his wil ingness to give testimony in other cases, and some of those who were interested in the affair had an idea that he was to be pardoned. Nearly five months after the Groffs and Machen were sent away, however, Dr. Lorenz was taken to the West Virginia prison with a batch of other prisoners. With time off for good behavior the sen-tence of Dr. Lorenz expired last Saturday. When Dr. Lorenz is discharged from the prison he will leave there A. W. Machen and George W. Beavers as the only representatives of the alleged conspirators against the government in the post office cases. Beavers will be the next one re-leased, having been sent to prison to serve two years. Machen finished the first term imposed upon him and he is now serving his second sentence of two years.

Cupid Working Overtime, With Result That Thousands of Tender Missives Are Exchanged.

Uncle Sam is "swamped."

The old gentleman never acknowledges the soft impeachment unless driven into a corner, but he came forward this morning and voluntarily confessed that he is "up against it." Usually our smiling, ubiquitous Uncle Samuel carries his many burdens with never a murmur of complaint, and is content to serve his citizens diligently and well, his one aim being to further the interests of the many without giving cause for complaint to any.

Uncle Sam's trouble today is that he has been called upon to carry so many thousands of copies of "Won't you be my valentine?" "To my sweetheart," and other similarly tender billet doux that his broad back proved unequal to the load. The result has been that "Unkie" wants to secure unanimous consent to a petition to St. Valentine to extend the patronage of his annual visitation over another twenty-four hours and have two "St. Valentine days"

Everybody knows that this great big relative of the dear people has provided a Post Office Department to act as go-between or bearer of all sorts of communications which may bear the significant one, two or three cent stamp, but his department was organized to meet ordinary conditions. from the assistants to the elongated wearer of the striped trousers and star-spangled coat, who are charged with the handling of the mails.

Employes a Unit.

Veteran employes of the local post office were a unit in declaring at noo ntoday that never in the history of the city has there been such a heavy mail to hancle as there is today. At 9 o'clock this morn ing all the carriers' tables and distributing boxes on the big central post office floor were losded with miniature mountains of letters and valentines in all manner of packages and envelopes, and there were still a round dozen truck loads and as many enormous sacks full of inbound and outbound mail which had not even been touched. The mail which should have been delivered at 9 o'clock had not yet gone out of the office at noon, and it was officially predicted that many of today's mails will not be delivered until tomorrow. Hence the retition to St. Valentine to give his saintly approval to the exchange of anonymous proposals of marriage, etc., February 14-15 in-

No one needs to be told that today is St. Valentine's, for he or she who did not receive some mark of a friend's affection appropriate to the day was entitled to single himself or herself out as an object of sympathy. Similarly, he or she who did not receive a "comic" directed at his or her more or less unconscious failing, was to be congratulated. Dealers all over the city report an unprecedented demand for all sorts, sizes and conditions of valen-

The captain thought that we ought to try to head for Watch Hill. We did, but it was head for Watch Hill. We did, but it was no use. The wind and combers tossed us in the opposite direction. It was so cold that we couldn't handle the oars after a while and we were forced to just drift. The captain said the wind ought to bring us to Block Island, so we just sat and waited. Cold? I never felt anything like it was body eit like stone. I had no feel. it. My body felt like stone. I had no feeling in any part of me. The boat was half filled with water from the wash of the waves. PURSER DEFENDS CAPTAIN.

Says McVey Did All He Could to Save Passengers.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., February 14.-This the story of the Larchmont wreck as told by Purser Young, who was in his office when the two ships came together. He rushed out in the cabin to find what was the matter, and was almost blinded at once by the steam.

"I met the steward," said Young, "and he told me that the steam pipe had burst. The people were pouring out into the cabin in their night clothes. I shouted for every one to get up to the hurricane deck, where the boats were. I could hear others of the crew shouting the same orders.
"When I reached that deck I saw members of the crew at the different boats. I am positive that every man was at his proper station and that they did everything hey could to care for the passengers. "My place under the rules was in the captain's boat, which was up near the bow. I found the captain directing the launching of this beat. Nearly all of the passengers seemed to be at the stern. There were only four boats there. The ship was going down fast. Our boat would have held ten persons. We got seven in her. The reason why only two of these were passengers was because there were no passengers where we tried to get back for more, but there was these were enough for the people, but I'm not certain of that. "It was about six minutes after we launched our boat that the Larchmont sank. She seemed to settle by the stern. We saw the lights disappear as she went down and heard cries from the ship. Then we looked around for other boats. Several times we thought we saw a boat and rowed toward it, but each time it turned out to be a wave. It was like trying to row agains Niagara. We drifted to the island. "Capt. Increase the Pay Now. To the Editor of The Star:

I am one of a large number who wish to commend you for the position you have aken relating to the question of increased salaries to government employes. That such increase should be granted, in view of the increased cost of living, admits of no doubt. That something should be done to relieve the present necessities of an intelli-gent and faithful class of public servants, no fair-minded person at all familiar with the my observation where memoris of are unable to purchase actual necessities and where the strictest economy must be and in order to make ends meet. And practiced in order to make ends meet. And this not among those who are extravagant or improvident, but in cases where no mem-ber of the family uses liquors or tobacco but where all are industrious, upright, moral, church-going people.

Of course the increased salaries to our servants on the Hill are perfectly proper. They are most of them poor and need the additional $2,500 to meet the 50 per cent increased cost of living. No one will object. creased cost of living. No one will object to the few millions increase to our worthy soldier friends who stood by the country in its hour of peril. It was right to pass the service pension bill. The "commission to inquire into compensations of federal officials and employes" is a splendid conception. But why not put into practice the "square deal" and admit the fact that the government clerk is practically the only person who is worse off instead of better off by the who is worse off instead of better off by the present prosperous times? Admitting the fact, why not apply the remedy now, when the remedy is needed? About the equities and necessities of the case there can be no reason for discussion. Future investigation is undoubtedly proper; but present relief is sorely needed, and all the facts and statistics necessary to intelligent and just action are readily available. E. WILLSON.

meet the main requisites of the committee in being adjacent to the State Depart-ment, it being assumed that the new State ment, it being assumed that the new state Department building will be located on the mall near 17th street. The available ground would afford sufficient space about the American republic palace to insure a dignified and imposing appearance for the structure and quiet and removal from the turmoil of the city would also be assured.

Advocates of Other Sites. On the other hand, advocates of other sites have urged that the building should be located in a more accessible position as regards street railroads and public traffic, and also that the purpose of its founder would be better served by placing the new building in a most conspicuous location. All of these considerations have appealed to the members of the committee, and it is for them now to decide upon the final location. It is stated that the necessary money for the purchase of the site can be had regardless of the location as between several of the sites under consideration. Congress has provided a specific appropriation of $250,000 for a new home for the bureau. It s doubtful, however, if that entire could be expended for a site alone without violation of the spirit of the act of

Michael O'Connor Wants Wholesale

The request of Michael J. O'Connor to transfer his wholesale liquor license from 42 H street northwest to the corner of 10th and C streets northeast was the subject of a hearing before the District excise board this morning. Mr. O'Connor furnished the necessary number of signers for the transfer and the only objection offered was that there was no need for a saloon in the neighborhood in question, and that establishing a wholesale place would mean the inauguration of a "bucket business," which Albert E. Shoemaker, attorney for the Anti-Saloon League, stated would be not only objectionable and offensive but a detriment to the vicinity. Others who spoke in opposition to the issuing of the transfer were W. S. Ransom and A. C. Wrenn, property wners in the immediate vicinity of the site

AMERICAN REPUBLICS.

Within a week it is expected that the committee charged with the selection of a site for the new home for the bureau of American republics will have reached a decision. That committee is composed of Secretary Root, Assistant Secretary Bacon and Mr. John Barrett, director of the bureau. So far, it is stated, no less than a dozen sites, more or less eligible, have been offered by syndicates or individuals, but no selection has yet been made. Among them is the purchased site of George Washington University, in Van Ness Park, at the foot of 17th street. The fact that that offer has been made, however, is regarded as final evidence that the university authorities have concluded to change its location and it is understood that "Oak Lawn," the property of Mrs. A. M. Dean, on Connecticut avenue, will be the new location of the university.

Two distressful and heartrending scenes vere enacted in the Juvenile Court yesterday afternoon, and both involved the separation of mothers from their children. The first came up in the case of Susan Early, alias Georgiana Ford, on a petition to have her infant child taken from her. The defendant appeared in court under the restraint of Warden Harris of the jail, and the testimony showed that the woman is sentenced to Moundsville penitentiary, to which she will be committed Friday, and she has a baby one month old. It was thought best not to have the infant imprisoned with the mother. She looked tenderly at her child, and while tears rolled down her cheeks she kissed it and walked from the court room.
